DON'T YOU HATE POP-UPS?

YOU'RE A WINNER!

Click here

So I've got the hot chocolate and I'm settled at the computer dialing up to the internet listening to the sweet, comforting sound of the modem beeping and squealing away, registering my computer on the network, verifying my username and password and then announcing a successful connection. Oh blessed peace, this just has to be my favorite part of the day...logging onto the net!

I reel in anticipation of what I may discover out there in the realms of cyber space this time. Oh, and I get onto the chores as well, email, banking, virus updates and all the other necessities. Then BANG! Before I even start to ride the first virtual wave over the horizon, I get hit with a pop-up. Grrrrrrrr. Don't you just hate pop-ups?

On line casinos, special offers, surveys and my biggest pet hate, you're a winner – click here to claim your prize! Pop-ups are relentless, just like flies buzzing around your head in a swarm. Swat a couple and they disappear for a bit but their mates back them up and then they come straight back at you in a frenzy of mindless annoyance.

Pop-ups are intrusive and immensely annoying, but there is a more serious side with regards to the security of your system. Small pieces of data are left behind in your computer as you use the internet that reveals information about your activities. Cookies, histories and cache files provide plenty of information to pesky snoops, and if that's not bad enough, these can impact on your systems performance.

Thankfully, there are ways to combat those pesky pop-ups, advertising and spyware. Programs such as Windows and Internet Washer and Ad Aware, just to name a few, are useful tools in the war against advertising software and spyware. These programs are small and easily installed from either the internet or from those utilities disks attached to the front of some of the PC magazines you can find down at the newsagent and they are relatively inexpensive, sometimes even free! Bargain!

Block the pop-ups and spyware and experience the incredible difference. Just like a picnic with no flies! Surfs' up dude.
